Comer shares vision in day-long visit

By TOM MILLS
NEWS EDITOR

Republican gubernatorial candidate James Comer spent the day in Greensburg Jan. 28, visiting communities around the county, meeting with supporters in Summersville, Pierce and Greensburg.

Comer, the Kentucky Agriculture Commissioner who is seeking the Republican nomination for governor in the May primary, has long ties to Green County, something that he remembers every time he travels to his Tompkinsville home from his state office.

"There is only one person running for governor who can get to Greensburg, Summersville and Grab without having to put it in a GPS," he said. "If we get a governor who knows the County Courthouse people, knows the City Hall people, knows the farm leaders and the school system, then I think we can work together to attract industry and build roads that need to be built in Green County, and that's what I pledge to do."

Commissioner Comer represented Green County for 11 years as part of his House of Representatives district when he served in the Kentucky Legislature. As a member of the State House, he fought for what he could for Green County and his district, he said, but that pales in comparison to what he could do were he to win the governor's office.

"I wouldn't be here today if it were not for the people of Green County and the support you have provided me over the years, and I want to return the favor," he said. "The governor has all the power in this state."

State senators and representatives can vote to place projects the queue, but it's the governor who gets things done, Comer said.

"You've had roads in the six-year road plan for 30 years," he said. "Just because its in the plan does not mean its going to be built because there are more roads in the plan than there is money to build them. It is left to the discretion of the governor as to which roads are built and which are delayed."

Mills talks of issues facing session

By CLEVIS JEFFRIES
STAFF WRITER

"I'm really more interested in acting on your behalf when it comes to making laws and taking care of business in this state." This is the sentiment State Rep. Terry Mills shared with Greensburg Rotary members Jan. 27 at their regular weekly meeting.

He spoke of his desire to get input from his constituency on issues likely to be addressed by the state legislature when it convenes this week.

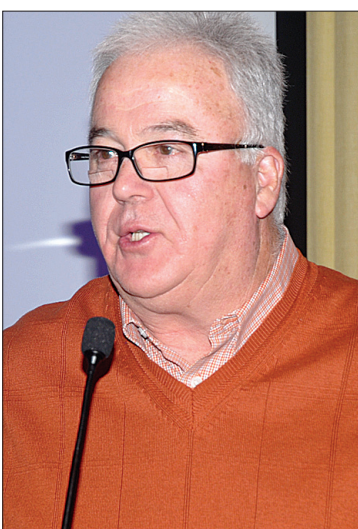

Mills told Rotary, "I do want to know how you feel about some of these issues."

He said, as of now, some 179 bills have been filed and before the session ends approximately 1,000 to 1,200 bills will likely be filed.

Rep. Mills remarked that about 10 percent of those will become law.

He commented that his work as a legislator is a rewarding experience.

"It's interesting; it's fas-

State Rep. Terry Mills

inating and you really feel like you're at the heart of government when you're there," he said.

The state representative informed Rotary members of issues that are likely to be considered this session.

A proposal for a Smoke Free Kentucky in public places across the state is likely to come up for a vote this session, he said.

Also, Mills said, there is a movement to allow for a local sales tax option.

He noted that an amendment to the constitution for this must first be placed on the ballot in 2016 and approved by the voters.

The state constitution will have to be changed, the representative said, that will allow local counties and cities to pass an additional sales tax of up to one percent on sales.

He commented that there is also talk about legislation to improve the Teacher Retirement System by the issuing of bonds.

Rep. Mills said the momentum seems to be to make, through a bond issue, the system more solvent for a certain period of time.

Road funding is another major issue facing the legislators. With the loss in revenue from fallen gas taxes, the state is likely to lose approximately 20 percent of its road funding budget, he said.

Mills noted there is a proposal to do something about this shortfall.

He said also a bill has been filed to allow the use of medicinal marijuana prescribed by physicians.

According to the representative, efforts to raise the minimum wage is another issue facing the legislature.

"It won't happen this year because our legislature is still divided," Mills said.

There is also a bill filed to replace the death penalty with a sentence of life without parole, he said.

State Rep. Mills said that people should inform their legislators as to where the emphasis should be placed when it comes to the transportation budget.

What monies are available, he said, "It all comes back to road funding."

"I think my job is to represent the people who sent me there. I don't want to be a politician; I want to be a representative," Rep. Mills said.

Letter

Thank you

To the Editor:

During my recent medical rounds at Golden Living Center, I was asked to assist with a medical emergency on a patient at the center; Green County EMS was notified as well.

When the EMTs and paramedic arrived, they were extremely professional and instrumental in providing care as usual. Their promptness was appreciated.

I remember during the early years of my medical career, I too, was an EMT/Fireman. We responded 24/7 often in extreme weather and in dangerous situations. Rarely, did anyone voice any appreciation whatsoever.

I would like to take this time to thank all the emergency responders in the community. I have found Green County emergency personnel to be the best of the best.

Sincerely,
Dr. William D. Feltner

Legislative Perspective on Ky. Gen. Assembly

Those who say you can't get something for nothing apparently have never met a volunteer.

About two-thirds of adults in our country actively help others like a neighbor, while roughly a fourth go a step further and donate time through their churches, civic groups, charities, schools and other helpful organizations.

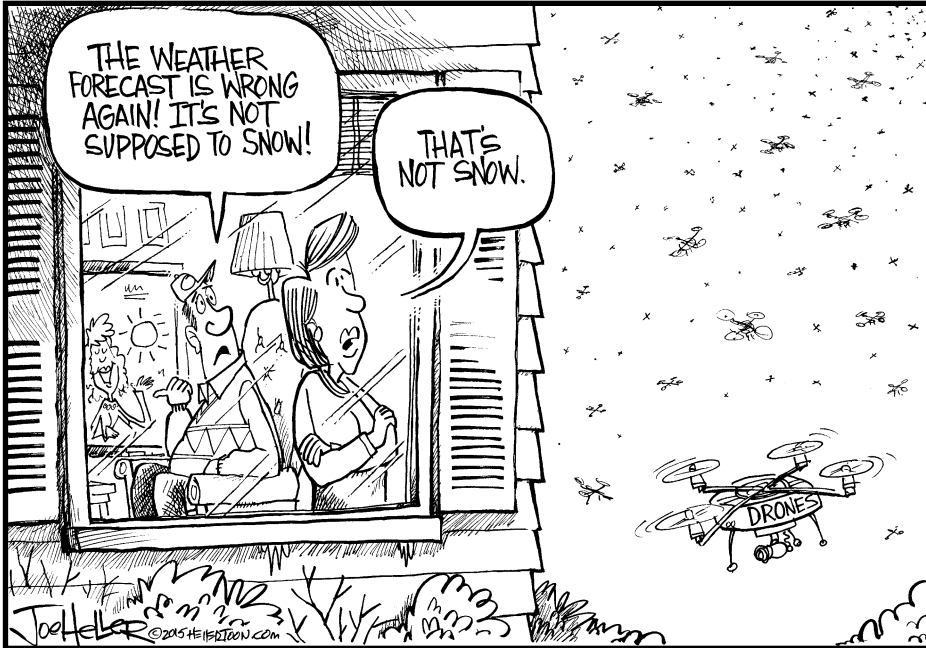

That group provides about 8 billion hours of work for free each a year, according to the Corporation for National and Community Service, and the value of that time is estimated at $175 billion. For Kentucky, nearly 800,000 people volunteered in 2013, putting in 87 million hours worth about $2 billion.

Collecting and distributing food to those in need, fundraising and mentoring youth are the three largest categories of volunteering, the center says.

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics adds that the 35-44 age group has the highest volunteer rate, but the most hours per volunteer goes to those between 65 and 74. Among young adults, college students volunteer at a rate twice as high as those not enrolled in postsecondary education.

Beyond giving our time, we are also generous in donating money as well. The Giving USA Foundation put that figure nationally at more than $335 billion in 2013, which was near pre-recession levels and more than a fifth higher than it was in 2009.

Kentucky is blessed to have a wide variety of organizations whose chief mission is to help others.

Habitat for Humanity, for example, has built more than 2,300 homes across the commonwealth over the last two decades and has a presence in about half of our counties. Over the last 60-plus years, WHAS Crusade for Children has raised more than $160 million.

There are also more than 17,000 non-profit organizations in Kentucky, and they employ nearly 10 percent of the state's workforce while generating nearly $24 billion in revenues.

AmeriCorps, a federally-backed program that celebrated its 20th anniversary last fall, is another organization making a difference. More than 900,000 have taken part over the years, including 9,400 in Kentucky. Their work ranges from tutoring children and helping survivors of domestic violence to making sure communities are better prepared for emergencies. In 2013, those in Kentucky also trained and supervised almost 16,000 volunteers.

The program is administered by the Kentucky Commission on Community and Volunteerism and Service (KCCVS), which is part of the state's Cabinet for Health and Family Services.

In addition to that work, KCCVS oversees the Governor's Service Awards, which are also in their 20th year. If you know of a volunteer or group deserving recognition, now is an ideal time to highlight what they do.

The awards will be presented by early summer, but the deadline to submit a nomination is Feb. 18th. There are 14 categories, including one that recognizes senior citizens and another focusing on youth. There are awards for faith-based groups, corporations and those whose volunteering took place primarily beyond our borders. Most of the awards have to pertain to service given in 2014, but there is a lifetime achievement award to recognize someone's enduring dedication.

To learn more about the awards and to submit an application, visit www.chfs.ky.gov/dfrcvs/kccvs/govawards.html or call (800) 239-7404, ext. 3841.

There is never a bad time to recognize those who selflessly give their time and talents, but a spotlight will be focused on their efforts when Governor Beshear proclaims April 12-18 to be Kentucky Volunteer Week.

10-year-old sent to hospital

FROM STAFF REPORTS
The Green County Ambulance Service transported a 10-year-old Canmer girl to an area hospital Sunday after the van in which she was a passenger overturned.
Green County Deputy Sheriff Josh Judd said Thomas J. Rader, 48, 6760 Columbia Hwy., was traveling west in a 2003 Dodge van and Louis D. Barbour, 68, 1298 Hall Town Road, Canmer, was traveling east in a 2003 Chrysler van in a heavy down-pour at approximately 1:28 p.m. Sunday when the vehicles sideswiped near the intersection of Old Springs Road.
The Barbour vehicle rolled, went airborne, struck a tree and came to rest on its wheels.
Kennady Barbour, 10, was ejected from the vehicle and was transported to Taylor Regional Hospital with non-life threatening injuries.
Neither of the drivers, nor a passenger in the Barbour vehicle, Maggie C. Barbour, 65, were injured.

Correction

Due to a reporting error, a victim in an automobile accident in Hart County was misidentified as a female. Taylor D. McCubbins, 20, who was transported to Jane Todd Crawford Hospital following the accident, is male. The driver of the vehicle that struck McCubbins vehicle was female. The Record-Herald apologizes for the error.

Cultivate a Sense of Leisure

I know that there is nothing better for people than to be happy and to do good while they live. That each of them may eat and drink, and find satisfaction in all their toil—this is the gift of God.

Ecclesiastes 3:12-13

Work and Productivity may be important, but they aren't the only important things in life, or even the most important things in life. Most of us would probably agree that God and our family should come before our job, and that the whole point of work is to help us support ourselves and our families. A much neglected area of many people's lives today is leisure. We are so busy with work and the workday aspects of life (e.g., cooking, cleaning, etc.) that we don't find time for play. Play can be anything from playing catch with your children to enjoying music to playing games. The arts are also an important aspect of leisure, and simply going to a museum or to the movies can be a nice break from the monotony of our work lives. Children are often better at playing than adults, so you might just let the kids decide on the playtime activity. Try something you haven't tried before. Throw a Frisbee or make up a new game. Put on a play with your family or friends, or play a guessing game. There is no end to the ways in which we might enjoy our leisure time.

Growing older has negative perception

Perhaps it is a fear of growing old that induces some younger people to have a negative perception of the elderly around them, says the Association of Mature American Citizens.

Anne Karpf, who wrote the book, How to Age, said in a recent New York Times Opinion Article: "Ageism has become described as prejudice against one's future self. It tells us that age is our defining characteristic and that, as midnight strikes on a milestone birthday, we will become nothing but old - emptied of our passions, abilities and experience, infused instead with frailty and decline."

A number of recent studies have shown that the older folks among us are happier and more content than those youthful offenders, says AMAC.

As Karpf, who is 64, put it: "old people simply care less about what others think, but also, I think, that our sense of what's important grows with age. We experience life more intensely than before, whatever our physical limitations, because we know it won't last forever."

Gracie has made good strides from last year and attended a camp at UK to work on her post play and you can see the improvement. Gracie is not afraid to be physical and has excellent hands and touch around the basket. Gracie has played real well on both the freshman and JV teams this year as she is one of our better scorers.

Grace is the point guard on both our freshman and JV teams and has gained valuable experience this season. Grace is learning not to let one mistake led to others which is a key for point guards. Grace has a good 3-point shooter that will become more consistent as she gets stronger and is developing her ball-handling every day.

Kylie is getting better every day as she is gaining in confidence to play against play-able bigger and stronger than her. Kylie has an excellent shot and works extremely hard every day to get better. Kylie is continuing to develop her ball-handling which is key for a smaller player her size to take her game up another level.

Comer outlines vision for state said, along with making all rural areas more viable economically.

Comer said there are opportunities for the state's rural areas, but to make that a reality, the culture of state government will have to change and he can bring about that change, something he has already begun in the Department of Agriculture.

When he took the agriculture commissioner's office, Comer called for an audit that eventually led to his predecessor, Richie Farmer, being sentenced to 27 months in federal prison.

"We saw some problems and we fixed them," he said. "Today, that office is transparent, efficient and we've shrank the size of our agency to do more with less. That's what we need to do across all state government."

Comer said that is why he is running for the state's highest office.

"I'm running for governor because I've seen what is happening to a lot of our rural counties because of the business climate in Kentucky," he said. "The rural counties have been forgotten about in Frankfort and every rural county has the same problem. When their best and brightest graduate high school and go to further their education, they have a hard time coming back to their hometown because we don't have the same opportunities in the small counties as we do in the bigger counties or other states."

Comer said that by changing the culture in state government, the business climate in Kentucky can be changed to make it easier for local officials to attract industries to come into the counties and cities.

"We can do that in one legislative session by focusing on the things the states that are growing have already implemented," he said. "Right to work is big issue. It's controversial and I know not everybody agrees with it, but the bottom line is that if you are not a right to work state you are not going to be able to attract those good-paying manufacturing jobs."

Tax reform will also be a priority in his administration, Comer said. And tax reform will have wide-spreading benefits,

"I believe in public schools," Comer said. "I am the only candidate for governor whose kids attend public schools, and you have great schools in Green County, but one issue schools have had with revenue coming in is that the state's tax code is not growing with the economy. If you want to bring in a reliable source of revenue you have to have an elastic tax code and Kentucky's is not."

Comer said the state's tax code was written in the 50s and the whole economy has changed.

"Our tax code has not changed with it and we need to pass tax reform that lowers taxes, not raise taxes to help grow our economy," he said.

Comer said he wouldn't be in the race if he didn't believe he could win.

"Everywhere we've gone, we've gotten good crowds," he said. "And our part of the state can elect the next governor."

Historically low turnout during state election years, when no local elections are on the ballot, do not normally generate much interest.

"The turnout in the past four governor races, whether it is the republican or Democrat primary, has been between 11 and 18 percent," he said. "If we could get a 25 or 30 percent turnout in counties like Green, or Metcalfe, or Cumberland, Monroe, Hart, Taylor and Barren, we can elect the next governor."

The primary election is May 20.

incidents routed through the center including emergency telephone calls for assistance and agency-generated communications such as police officer radio calls.

In 2013, there were 11,201 such communications.

The Greensburg Police Department, which has the most communications of any agency, was responsible for more than a third of all communications. The 3,624 GPD communications in 2014 was down 12.7 percent from 2013, however, GPD Chief of Police Wayne Hedgespeth said the decrease could be attributed to a manpower shortage and to a heightened awareness among the populace in assisting the department in community policing and prevention of incidents.

The Green County Sheriff's Department, which had the second most number of communications at 2,346 in 2014, was down from 3,403 in 2013.

Police calls weren't the only decrease, though. Greensburg-Green County Fire and Rescue decreased 17.8 percent to 655 incidents. Summersville Fire Department, however, showed an increase of 12 percent with 74 incidents.

The Green County Ambulance Service, which responded to the third most incidents, actually increased 15.5 percent over 2013 with 2,261 calls.

Green County Rescue Squad incidents decreased 18.4 percent, with 111.

Record deer season

By Kevin Kelly
Kentucky Afield

After two seasons of record harvests, Green County's deer hunters kept the pace up this past season.

Statewide, the 2014-15 season closed on Jan. 19 with 138,892 deer checked; the second highest total on record and third consecutive season with a harvest exceeding 130,000 deer.

"I'm happy," said Gabe Jenkins, deer and elk program coordinator with the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "There are a lot of deer on the landscape, and we're seeing an uptick in license sales. We're providing hunting opportunity and our hunters are able to be successful. As an agency, that's what we want to do."

A record 144,409 deer were taken during the 2013-14 season when a spotty acorn crop put deer on the move.

Acorns were plentiful across much of the state this time around. Recognizing this, many hunters likely shifted their focus from field edges to the timber and travel corridors instead.

A strong opening month and an unprecedented start to the modern gun deer season emerged as key drivers.

"The three seasons where we have had our three greatest harvests have featured big Novembers," said David Yancy, deer biologist with Kentucky Fish and Wildlife. "And there's no question September has become more important or more interesting to hunters. I think hunters have gotten to where they like it and can't wait to get out there."

Hunters checked 5,928 deer in September, the third highest total on record for that month. Favorable weather across the state spurred a record harvest on opening weekend of modern gun deer season.

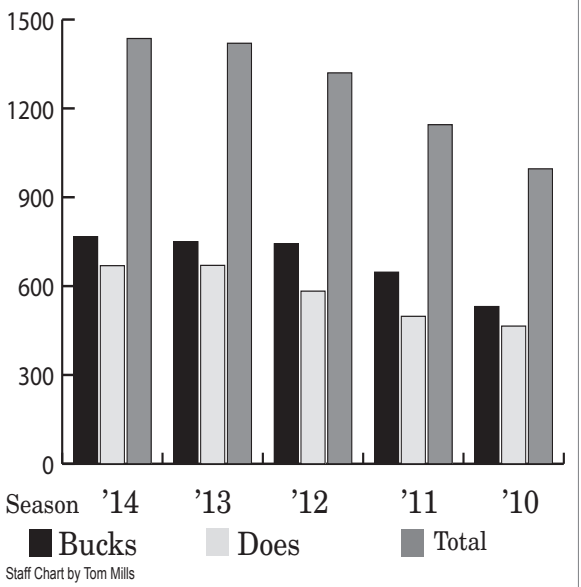

Compared to the previous season, the modern gun harvest finished at 102,889, down less than 2 percent from the season before.

Archers bagged 18,368 deer and muzzleloader hunters 14,673. Crossbow hunters accounted for 2,962 of the harvest total.

Owen County again led the state. Hunters there checked 3,470 whitetails. Pendleton County was next with 3,305 followed by Crittenden County at 3,224, Christian County at 3,062 and Graves County at 2,964.

The majority of deer taken were male. Female deer accounted for 45.7 percent of the overall harvest.

Green County Deer Season Harvest

Local harvest also set record

By Tom Mills
News Editor

Green County's deer hunters matched the statewide report, enjoying record success during the 2014-15 deer hunting season.

Local hunters reported taking 1,436 deer in Green County during the season that ended Jan. 19. That is an increase of 16 deer more than the previous season.

The harvest included 767 bucks, up 2.3 percent over the previous season.

The vast majority of deer were taken with modern firearms, with 1,182 taken by that method. Muzzleloader hunters took the second most, with 130. This is the first season that more deer were harvested by muzzleloader than archery. Bow and arrow hunters took 106, the fewest by that method since 2011.

Crossbow hunter success continued to rise, with 18 harvested, a 20 percent increase over the 2013-14 season.

The total deer harvest reported in Green County has risen every year since the 2008-09 season with 46 percent more taken this season than that year.

File photo

Chavis McDermott, who took this outstanding buck in November, was among the record number of successful Green County, and statewide, deer hunters in 2014.

Biologists estimated the statewide herd at 1 million deer entering this past season. Herd estimates are derived through computer modeling that takes into account harvest and age structure data.

Looking ahead, the prospects are promising for a strong 2015-16 season.

"We really had a more pronounced December and January rut," Jenkins said. "Those late ruts are usually an indicator of herd health. I heard a lot of people talking about fawns cycling in January. That's strictly related to health; the fact that they're good, fat and capable of doing that. More than likely, they will have a fawn, and that equates to more fawns on the landscape this spring which equates to more hunting opportunity next season."

The Kentucky Hunting and Trapping Guide annually features a list of trophy bucks harvested the previous season that met qualifications for entry into the Boone and Crockett Club's record books. A buck must net score 160 or higher typical or 185 or higher non-typical, as determined by the Boone and Crockett scoring system.

Hunters who want their trophy included in the list should send a non-returnable photo, copies of the completed and signed scoresheets, and include the county in which the deer was taken and the equipment used to harvest the deer to: Kentucky Hunting and Trapping Guide, #1 Sportsman's Lane, Frankfort, KY 40601 by May 1, 2015. The same information may also be submitted electronically by emailing info.center@ky.gov.

"Our Boone and Crockett submission numbers have been high over the past five years," Jenkins said. "That's a good indicator of health and herd quality."

Guthrie committees named

SPECIAL TO THE R-H

Congressman Brett Guthrie (KY-02) was named to two subcommittees for the House Committee on Education and the Workforce.

"This year, the committee will build off of last year's work to reauthorize the Higher Education Act as well as the Elementary and Secondary Education Act," said Congressman Guthrie. "This is important work and I'm looking forward to continuing to find solutions that put our students first and give today's teachers the tools they need to succeed in the classroom."

The Subcommittee on Higher Education and Workforce Training has jurisdiction over education and training above the high school level. The Subcommittee on Health, Employment, Labor and Pensions has jurisdiction over all employee-employer relations, including the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) and the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA).

"Kentucky's Second District is home to many world-class institutions for higher education and workforce development. Working together, we can address the issues facing today's students, like student loan reform and adding greater transparency to the system," said Congressman Guthrie.

"Last year Congress and the White House were able to work together to reauthorize our nation's workforce training laws. I'm hopeful that we can continue to work together on this issue as the law is implemented to further promote the education and skills needed to succeed in today's global economy. The vast majority of businesses that I visit tell me that they are ready to hire qualified workers with the right skills. Manufacturing jobs in particular are in high demand – and pay well. One of the best ways we can invest in the middle class is by making sure workers are getting the training they need to advance in their jobs and provide financial stability for their families," added Congressman Guthrie.

This is Congressman Guthrie's third term serving on the House Committee on Education and the Workforce, and on these two subcommittees. In addition, he also serves on the House Committee on Energy and Commerce, where he is Vice Chair of the Subcommittee on Health and serves on the Communications and Technology and Commerce, Manufacturing and Trade subcommittees.

Medical access bill reintroduced

Bill allows pharmacists Medicare reimbursement

SPECIAL TO THE R-H

Congressman Brett Guthrie (KY-02) Jan. 28 reintroduced legislation to allow Medicare reimbursement for specific pharmacist services in communities that are deemed medically underserved.

H.R. 592, the Pharmacy and Medically Underserved Areas Enhancement Act, was reintroduced with congressmen G.K. Butterfield (D-NC), Todd

Young (R-IN) and Ron Kind (D-WI). In the 113th Congress, H.R. 4190 was supported by 123 bipartisan cosponsors.

"Whether it's to inquire about medication, potential side effects, or discussing other ailments and complications, many patients depend on their local pharmacists," said Congressman Guthrie. "Expanding access to services for seniors isn't something important only to Kentucky, and I'm glad to have the bipartisan support of my colleagues from across the country."

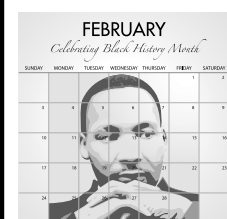

Many states allow pharmacists to provide additional services, such as immunizations, diabetes management, blood pressure screenings and routine checks. Despite the ability to perform such services, there is currently no mechanism for pharmacists to be reimbursed by the Medicare program.

"This common-sense bill creates a path forward for pharmacists to be reimbursed for these critical services they are already allowed to perform in medically underserved areas, in a cost-effective way to ensure these seniors have access to the services they need," added Congressman Guthrie.

To salt or not to salt is the big question

Using salt to season foods is a practice that has been widely criticized as being bad for your health, especially for the elderly. But a new study, published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, indicates that it may not be as bad of a habit as we once thought, according to the Association of Mature American Citizens.

The research concluded that "sodium intake was not associated with mortality or risk for cardiovascular disease and heart failure in a cohort of adults between 71 to 80 years of age. Our data emphasized the need for stronger evidence, preferably from rigorous, controlled trials testing additional thresholds for sodium intake, before applying a policy of further sodium restriction to older adults beyond the current recommendation for the general adult population (2,300 mg/d)."

The study is not a license for salt lovers to start overusing their salt shakers on their hamburgers and fries, says AMAC. It was the Roman orator Cicero who said: "Never go to excess, but let moderation be your guide."

TRH Diagnostic Radiology goes digital

SPECIAL TO THE R-H

Taylor Regional Hospital recently converted their current Radiology imaging rooms from Computed Radiography to Digital Radiography. This gives the physician the ability to instantly view the images in the trauma setting, operating room, intensive care unit and throughout the hospital.

"We have made a significant investment in technology for the benefit of our patients and community," says Jane Wheatley, CEO. "There are many hospitals in large cities that have not converted completely to DR technology, and we are honored to be the only hospital in our region to offer this."

For the 90 bed Taylor Regional Hospital, this represents a complete conversion to digital X-ray, replacing five fixed CR units and one analog portable X-ray unit. The hospital had utilized CR technology for nearly 12 years. "We chose to move forward to the digital technology in order to reduce patient dose and improve our exam turn-around-times," says Debbie Carrico, RTR, Director of Radiology. "The Aero DR has changed our workflow in a very positive way and allows us to perform exams more quickly and easily for our patients. Our patient population can receive the same high-quality imaging from Taylor Regional Hospital as they would in a larger facility without the need for them to travel."

Health care change driven by more than law

KY HEALTH NEWS

"Your doctor's visits might get longer, you deductibles probably will be higher and you might be paying cash to be treated at a Wal-Mart near you as Kentucky adapts to a vastly changing health care landscape," Mary Meehan reports for the Lexington Herald-Leader. "Nearly everything you know about how health care is paid for and provided will change during the next few years as patients and providers sort out the nuts and bolts of the Affordable Care Act."

But it's not just the health-reform law that's changing health care, Meehan reports from the Health Leadership Summit, held Thursday in Frankfort by state government and the Kentucky Hospital Association. She paraphrases the main speaker, Chas Roades, chief research officer for The Advisory Board Co., a Washington-based health consultant firm:.

"Even if parts of the law are dismantled, he said, the health care needs of aging baby boomers are driving a fundamental change in the system. If patients have more choice, he said, it will be important for doctors to make more personal connections with patients. The focus won't be rolling patients through the door at a furious clip but on spending time with them to find out what it is going on."

Roades said the focus is shifting from treatment of illnesses to prevention, so health-care providers will be rewarded for keeping people healthy, and the transition period for health-care providers will be tough.

State Health Secretary Audrey Haynes, who convened the meeting, said "We have to figure out how to have quality health-care services in the rural area of the state just like we do in the urban area."

Roades said educating people about better health should involve community organizations such as churches. "The average American has a fifth-grade health literacy," he said.

Gov. Steve Beshear said one key will be finding ways to reward patients for making responsible, informed choices: "We will fall short of our goals if we can't find ways to engage our patients in new and effective ways."

More Kentuckians support health reform

BY AL CROSS AND MELISSA PATRICK
KY HEALTH NEWS

The federal health-reform law is gaining support from Kentuckians, to the point that they are almost evenly divided about it.

Those are among the results of the latest Kentucky Health Issues Poll, conducted for the Foundation for a Healthy Kentucky among a random sample of almost 1,600 Kentucky adults Oct. 8 through Nov. 6, the final month of an election season in which the law was an issue.

After two years in which opinion of the law was clearly unfavorable, the poll found that 39 percent view it favorably while 41 percent view it unfavorably. That is well within the poll's error margin of plus or minus 2.5 percentage points, which applies to both numbers.

The findings are similar to a national survey taken at about the same time. The October 2014 Kaiser Health Tracking Poll found that 36 percent of U.S. adults had favorable views of the law; 43 percent were unfavorable, and 20 percent did not know or offered no opinion.

In the Kentucky poll, about as many people reported a negative impact from the law (21 percent) as a positive impact (18 percent). The positive-impact number rose from 7 percent in the 2013 poll, which was taken just after enrollment for expanded Medicaid and subsidized health insurance had opened.

Notably, 51 percent of those polled said they didn't have enough information to know how the law would affect them personally. That was down from 57 percent a year earlier.

Most of those who reported not having enough information, 64 percent, had not graduated from high school. Almost half of Kentuckians (47 percent) said they understood how the law would impact them personally. Sixty-six percent said the law had no effect on them.

"KHIP data trends show overall support for the ACA has risen since 2013 as more Kentuckians have gotten information about the law," Susan Zepeida, President and CEO of the Foundation for a Healthy Kentucky, said in a press release. "More work is needed to educate people about the law's provisions and potential impacts on families."

The poll was also conducted for Interact for Health, formerly the Health Foundation of Greater Cincinnati, by the Institute for Policy Research at the University of Cincinnati. It used landline and cell phones.

Opinions of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, often called Obamacare, are still driven partly by politics. The survey found that 58 percent of Democrats had favorable views of the law and 64 of Republicans had unfavorable views. Among independents, 42 percent had unfavorable views and 31 percent were favorable.

Amy's Veggie Fettuccine Alfredo

What You Need

- 2 tbsp olive oil
- 2 onions, chopped
- 1 1/2 tsp sugar
- 1 bell pepper, chopped
- 2-3 cloves garlic, coarsely chopped
- 3 carrots, julienned or sliced thin
- 1 small can of mushrooms, with their juice
- 1/4 c water
- 1/2 tsp chicken bouillon (optional)
- 1/4 c butter
- 1/4 -1/2 c flour
- 2 c half and half
- 1/3 c cooking sherry
- 1 pinch nutmeg

Directions

- Heat oil in skillet. Add onions and saute. After 3 minutes, add sugar to caramelize onions. Cook 2 more minutes. Add peppers and garlic. Cook about 5 minutes until softened and browned.
- Add carrots, mushrooms (with their liquid), water and bouillon. Cover and cook 8 minutes or until carrots are softened. Remove cover and continue cooking to evaporate liquid.
- While noodles are cooking, melt butter in small saucepan. Add flour and mix with whisk, cooking for 2-3 minutes. You'll want to add enough flour to get a thick paste.
- Add half and half, sherry, nutmeg, salt, and pepper. Cook, stirring continuously, until sauce thickens. Add Parmesan and mix well.
- Combine noodles, vegetables and sauce. Serve.
